

Building a Team of Leaders

Great teams, like great leaders, are made, not born. Teams that are cohesive, efficient and productive don't happen by accident. Successful teams work collaboratively; they're committed to working together towards shared goals. They are efficient because they value diversity and build on each other's strengths. They are productive because they have developed trust. This session is focused on the role of leaders and managers in building a high-performing team.